About the musicians:

Tommy Harevis: multi-instrumentalist and traveler. His performances oscillate between concert and performance, drawing inspiration from traditional world cultures.

The musician utilizes a range of ethnic instruments, including Native American flutes, the duduk, the Egyptian flute, and the dan moi. The music he presents is enigmatic and soothing at one moment, joyful and thought-provoking at another. Step by step, atmospheric pieces emerge before listeners.

Harevis has released numerous studio albums, both solo and with other musicians. His compositions are used in film productions and as a background for atmospheric events.

Nani: a multi-percussionist who combines classical drum kit with instruments from Asian, African, and South American traditions. Her play is a constant rhythmic narrative that accompanies flute improvisations in a duet with Tommy Harevis.

Janusz: Tommy's father who plays bass guitar, accompanying band in few songs, bringing groove to exotic flute and drums rhythms with deep bass sound.
